

Guide to Canadian Nursing Archival Resources

Principal Investigator: Diana Mansell

Funded by:

Canadian Association for the History of Nursing Association canadienne pour l'histoire du nursing

This national guide to nursing historical resources is the product of a national survey of nursing resources in Canadian archives, museums, and professional nursing organizations. The project began with a national mail survey to all known archives and museums to determine their nursing archival holdings. Next, various nursing organizations, nursing educational institutions, associate/affiliate nursing groups, and employment agencies were surveyed by telephone and e-mail. The third step was the identification of private and semiprivate records and collections. Finally, the information from these surveys was collated to produce this national guide to nursing historical resource material. The surveys were conducted with the help of research assistant Nicole Brown during the summer of 1999. This guide is made available to nurses and historians studying the history of Canadian nursing, effective May 2002.
